The vote on the question of giving aid to the bridge enterprise is to be canvassed by the city clerk and mayor to-day. The vote was so largely in favor of giving the desired aid that it is practically unanimous, and the canvass excites little interest, as it is only to determine the exact amount of the majority, and cannot affect the result in any way.

A wedding occurred at the Revere house Wednesday night, the happy man being Mr. J. Hogate, of South Omaha, and the bride being Mrs. Dora Carman, of Essex, Mich. Colonel Katley can have one crumb of comfort in the midst of defeat. He proved a brilliant campaigner, and demonstrated the fact that a lively fight can be made without resorting to mud throwing and personal abuse. He has made friends during the canvass, and has won for himself many honors, even if he did not win the congressional one. He has made strong speeches, has had and held large audiences everywhere he has spoken, and showing himself to be a gallant party leader.

COL. KEATLEYS PHILOSOPHY.

What He Considers the Cause of His Defeat.

THE TENTH AVENUE PROJECT.

A Dollar Wins a Valuable Oil Painting—Funeral of George Trauble—Republican Enthusiasm.

The Election Result Unchanged.

The figuring over the returns of the recent election result in little changes, and the result as shown from the official canvass will doubtless be the same as that already given.

Congressman Lyman's majority will be in the neighborhood of 1,000, and will probably go beyond that figure. The republican judicial ticket is elected by a larger majority. Tiernell appears to have received the largest vote, Carson next and Deemer third.

The vote on county clerk gives Shea, the present democratic incumbent, about 400, and Thomas, for recorder will receive about 300 majority.

The result of the congressional contest was doubtless as much a surprise to Colonel Keatley as to any person. He was very sanguine, and expressed himself to his most intimate friends as certain that he would be elected.

The worst of the defeated candidates is expressly friendly. He uses every possible means to make a winning, and to come out with less votes than any other of the seven candidates for justice, is a rebuke which, administered by his own party, is a severe one.

There is general rejoicing also over the defeat of Judge James, as county commissioner. This, too, was the work of fellow-democrats, who would not stand the defeat of a man by which a nomination was given him.

How does Keatley take it? What does he have to say? These queries have been asked on every hand. Colonel Keatley has kept very steady since he learned enough of the returns to convince him that he was defeated. The BEE man sought out Tom Bowman and asked him but he declared he had not seen Keatley. Last evening the Globe, which Colonel Keatley has so long been managing editor, contains the following, which may be considered as an official expression of what that gentleman has to say of the result:

Reporter—How do you feel over the result in the district, and what led to it?

Colonel Keatley—Of course, I feel somewhat disappointed, more so because of my party friends here in Council Bluffs, and at other points in the district. I have great reason to be proud of the endorsement I got here at my own home, and in my own county. I have heard of my republican adversary by handsome majorities in every precinct in the city. My majority over him in the city is 428, and in the county, 718. My majority in the district is 147 over the republican ticket. This is certainly gratifying to me personally.

Reporter—You must certainly feel grateful for the endorsement of your legislative career by those at home, last winter.

Colonel Keatley—I most certainly do feel so. Not only that, but I am proud of the manner in which I was endorsed by the Knights of Labor of the city. I also feel grateful to the many democrats who took off their coats and worked for me on election day. The younger as well as the older men of the party vied with each other to do me personal service in this matter. Many republicans wished my success, and they are equally deserving of my sincere thanks.

Reporter—What was the trouble outside of the county?

Colonel Keatley—Various things led to the final result. Quite a large number of democratic farmers, who led to believe that the cause was hopeless, and stayed their cornfields. In some of the counties the greenbackers were incensed at the withdrawal of Hutton, and to be revenged on him voted against me, and a body for the republican candidate for congress. In another county a person who assumed to lead the Knights of Labor in that county, submitted the proposition that should raise $500 among my friends for his benefit, and upon my refusal to listen to his proposition and to attempt to tax my friends for any pecuniary purposes, he exerted all his influence against me, and to some effect. In still another county I had rendered an important political service to a gentleman who was anxious to come under the republican banner, and in return for it, there was a majority in his precinct of eighty-five for my adversary, when by the fidelity of the gentleman whom I had aided, there would have been a majority in my favor. I have the evidence of numerous trades in counties outside of Pottawattamie, where local candidates actually bartered my name for theirs, and were defeated. A very few republicans, however, did trade, and they are receiving the contempt they deserve.

Reporter—Was this defection of the greenbackers in this campaign the result of trading in tickets?

I think not in Guthrie and Adair counties. I think in these two counties, the fusion was fairly complete. Our friends there made some mistake in the estimate of the strength of the republican ticket, and I think that is the only reason why they did not vote with it. It was not universally the case, however, in that county. For instance, in Seeley township, a farming community, I ran ten ahead of my ticket, and I might give you other illustrations from other townships in the same county.

Reporter—What deductions do you make in this campaign as the result of trading in tickets?

Colonel Keatley—None different from what I have always observed. In nine cases out of ten, in this campaign, where a candidate in a minority party has undertaken to trade for his personal benefit, he has succeeded in defeating himself and his own party. A square deal in politics will hold as good as in the ordinary transactions of life. This district is covered with political corpses blown to atoms almost by the trading blow.

Still Talking Tenth Avenue. Now that the bridge project has got into shape for further progress, the attention of the council and of many citizens will be directed to the project of running tracks up Tenth avenue, and the establishment of a freight depot there. The jobbers and wholesale men of the city have united in a unanimous petition for the council to grant the Union Pacific the right of way along the avenue. Their request coming from men who have such large commercial and property interests here, has great weight, and deservedly so. It is claimed that in addition to the conveniences given these shippers, that the proposed action will be the entering wedge for a union depot in the southern part of the city. Some in other parts of the city object to this, not because they object to a union depot, for they favor it, but they all want to have the depot located right near their own property. As the union depot cannot be located next to everybody's lot, some must concede some things. It is quite evident that the southern part of the city, for the right of way to the very center of the city would cost so much as to render the project impracticable. The most weighty objection raised thus far against granting the request of these heavy business houses, is the question of settling the damages of property owners along the avenue. There is little improved property affected by it, and this, it is thought, can be adjusted in a satisfactory manner. It is claimed that property along the avenue will be in demand for warehouse purposes at a greater price than it now brings for residential purposes. An attempt is being made to change the proposed route somewhat, so as to avoid injury to some of the property, the owners of which are so earnest in their protest. It is an important matter and will be handled with care and wisdom. Some have been alarmed because they feared that this would result in taking away the dummy depot from Broadway. It is understood that the Union Pacific is ready to bind itself not to abandon the depot, so that this objection would be done away with. The matter is being discussed with much earnestness, and the action of the council will be watched with interest. It is felt by many that this project is as great a move in the direction of building up the city as any which have lately been brought before the public, and that there should be no action taken which will result in killing the promised boom.

The Evening Herald needs a new mathematician. It took much pains to give a tabulated showing of the vote in the county, and by it it is apparent that Mayfield was elected supervisor, instead of Frum. There was only a mistake of 800 in that column. Frum is clearly elected by 150 majority. Let the voters for chairmen that official was also deprived of 100 votes by this same table. Better let out the space to some advertiser than to number it with such misleading figures pretend.

Lyman's Serenade. Last evening a little after 8 o'clock the friends of Congressman Lyman called at his residence, No. 629 Willow avenue, and tendered him a serenade. After a few appropriate remarks by Mr. Lyman he invited the company into the house and after receiving congratulations on his re-election, refreshments were served by Mrs. Lyman who had been previously apprised of the serenade. The company remained an hour or so, but throughout the entire evening visitors were numerous, who called to present their respects and congratulations to the re-elected congressman.
